

Preschool Self-Portrait Rubric and Talk About Self & Family Prompts

	4	3	2	1
Facial Features	All basic features are included and are placed correctly: eyes, ears, nose, mouth and hairs. May include other important element, such as glasses.	Student forms a circle and includes forms for eyes, nose, mouth, and hair, with approximate orientation and placement.	The student forms a circle for face with minimal facial characteristics (eyes, mouth). May not be placed correctly.	Random scribbles or forms with no connection to content
Picture Content and Proportions	The student draws a head and torso, including facial features and body parts that are proportional. 7 -10 body parts. Includes other important features, such as leg braces, glasses, hearing aids, ear rings, etc.	The student draws a head and stick figure body with minimal facial features, 4-6 body parts, not yet proportional	The student only draws a circle with two sticks for arms or less detail.	No recognizable forms in relation to content
Coloration	Uses a variety of colors that reflect own features throughout. May use different pressure to create value/shade/texture.	Uses 2-4 colors appropriate for features, though may not be used correctly throughout.	Uses 2-3 colors, but not in accordance to real facial features, body parts, or clothing.	Uses one color, no extra color is added, even when prompted.
Details	Includes hair texture/design/length and at least 3 advanced features: eye brows, eye lashes, neck, clothing (details),	Includes hair length/cut and 1-2 advanced features, with out prompting.	Includes 1 advanced feature from the list (in column 4), with a prompt.	No details are included

Interview Questions: To prompt a bit of a conversation. Record responses.

1. Tell me something that is special (unique) about you? It might be something you are good at, something you like to do, or something you enjoy doing. Listen, then prompt - Tell me more. Add a Why or How question?
2. Tell me about your family. Who is in your family? What does your family do together? What do you like to do with your family? Prompt for details.